

Nuclear power stations generate electricity using the energy given out when uranium or plutonium fuels break up through nuclear