

The slower the object is moving, the more force needed to maintain its circular motion.